Musswell Hill Garden

MUSWELL HILL GARDEN

HORTUS CONCLUSUS

This garden is set in one of the highest points of London. It was created in a fitting way to the modern interiors of the clients. Over the balustrade planted with wisterias and pots of herbs as well as over steps cascading raised beds that reach the end of the garden, one can enter the lower level. It contains a paving of black slate contracting with the white raised beds and slate coping. Furthermore it offers space for an included wine cellar and storage space. The second area includes the lawn sloping down to the third area as well as a decking space and different plants. An accumulation of trees forms a clear separation to the third area which was made with self-binding gravel aiming to create a jungle-like, exotic space. A fireplace and a garden- gym make this part of the garden further special. In the evening led lighting lets the garden appear as a magical space.

The Muswell Hill contains several levels connected with steps and a balustrade while composing a contrast of dark and light throughout the garden.
